Italian Design Philosophy

Italian design philosophy cannot be captured in a single word. Instead, it is a way of thinking shaped by culture, craftsmanship, architecture, and the art of living beautifully.

Rooted in heritage, it emphasizes longevity, quality materials, and a "less is more" approach that focuses on a few, well-chosen pieces.

Italian design values longevity over temporary trends. Rather than following what is fashionable for the moment, the focus is placed on balance, proportion, and enduring elegance that remains relevant through time.

Furniture is designed not only for today, but for years of living, gathering, and evolving alongside the spaces we call home.

Beauty and practicality are never separated. Every curve, material, and detail is thoughtfully considered to create pieces that feel refined, comfortable, and effortless to live with every day.

The goal is not excess, but harmony — where function quietly enhances the experience of living.

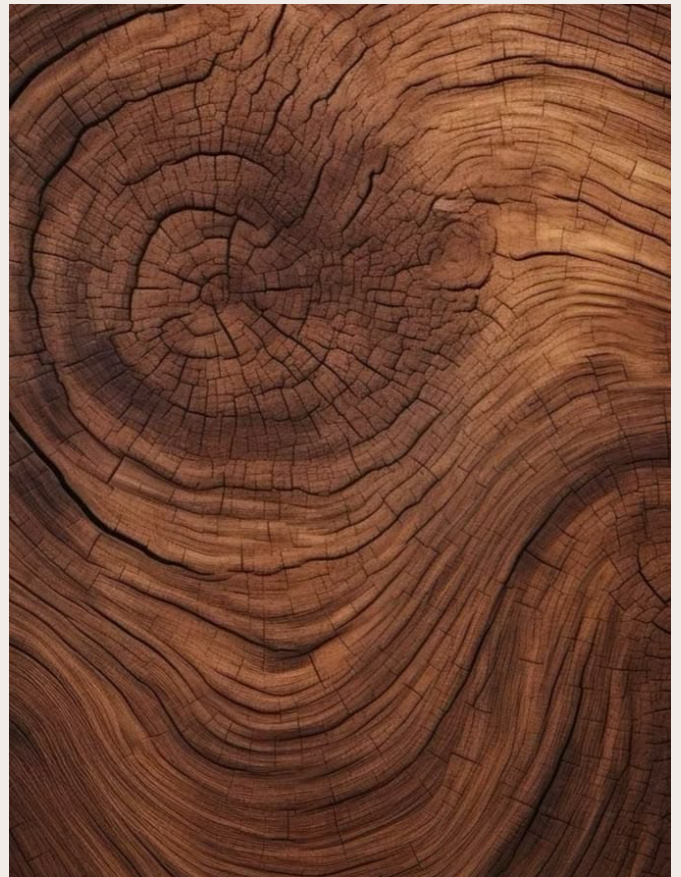

A Celebration of Materials

Walnut ◀

"Warm, elegant and naturally distinctive."

Walnut wood is celebrated for its rich colour, elegant grain patterns, and natural warmth.

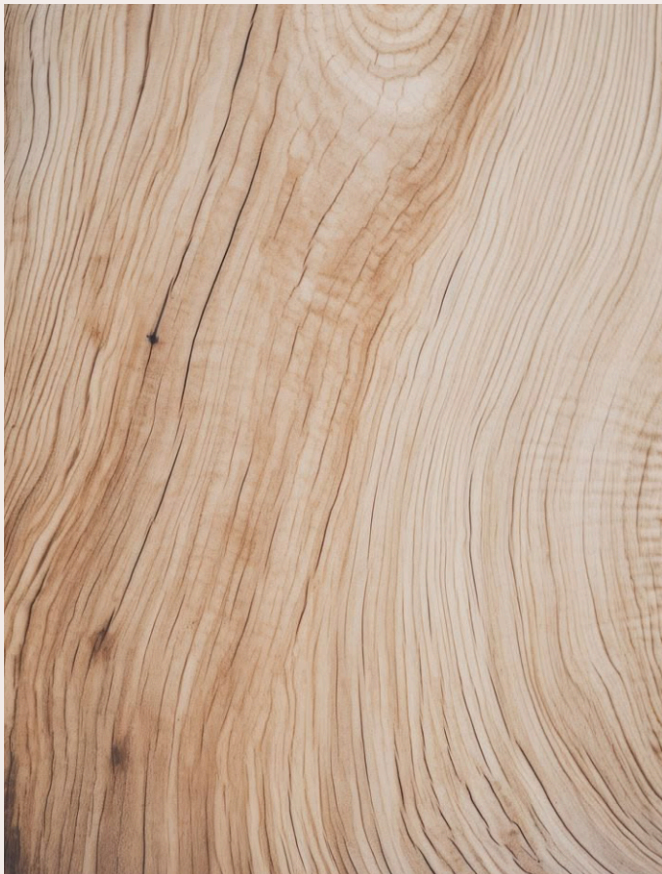

Carefully crafted into dining chair frames, sculptural table bases and details, it brings timeless sophistication and organic beauty to every dining space. Its strength and durability ensure lasting performance while complementing both contemporary and classic interiors.

▶ Oak

"Light, understated and resilient."

Oak is prized for its strength, fine grain, and enduring appeal. With its naturally light tones and subtle texture, it lends a sense of effortless elegance while showcasing the authenticity of solid wood. Crafted to stand the test of time, oak brings both resilience and refined beauty to contemporary dining spaces.

◀ Full Grain Aniline Leather

"The finest hide."

Renowned for its natural beauty and luxurious feel, we use Italian Full Grain Aniline Leather that represents the highest standard of leather craftsmanship. Retaining the hide's natural grain and unique markings, the leather develops a rich patina over time, becoming even more distinctive with age. Soft to the touch, breathable, and exceptionally durable, it offers a seating experience that only authentic leather can provide.

Fabric ▶

"Comfort in weaves and textures."

Our carefully curated fabric collection offers a versatile selection of textures, colours, and finishes to suit a variety of interiors. Selected for both comfort and durability, each upholstery fabric provides a soft, inviting touch while maintaining its beauty through everyday living spaces.

Marble ◀

"No two pieces are ever the same."

Formed by nature over millions of years, each marble tabletop is a unique work of art, distinguished by intricate veining and timeless character. Explore a curated range of natural stones, each offering its own colours, patterns and beauty to create a distinctive statement for every dining setting.

▶ Porcelain

"Beauty engineered for everyday living."

Combining contemporary elegance with remarkable performance, porcelain offers durable surfaces for modern dining. Resistant to scratches, stains, heat and everyday wear, each tabletop is available in matte or gloss finishes, offering refined aesthetics with uncompromising practicality and minimal maintenance.

Chapter One

Flowing Forms

Inspired by the fluidity found in nature and contemporary sculpture, this collection transforms solid wood into graceful, flowing forms that appear almost weightless. Every curve is carefully considered, balancing visual movement with structural integrity to create a dining table that is both expressive and enduring.

The sculptural base of the Arden table is more than a supporting element. It is the centrepiece of the design, inviting the eye to follow every contour while celebrating the warmth and natural character of wood.

Here, craftsmanship becomes art, and function becomes sculpture.

Let the table take centre stage.

A sculptural dining table naturally becomes the focal point of the room. Pair it with dining chairs that complement rather than compete with its expressive form.

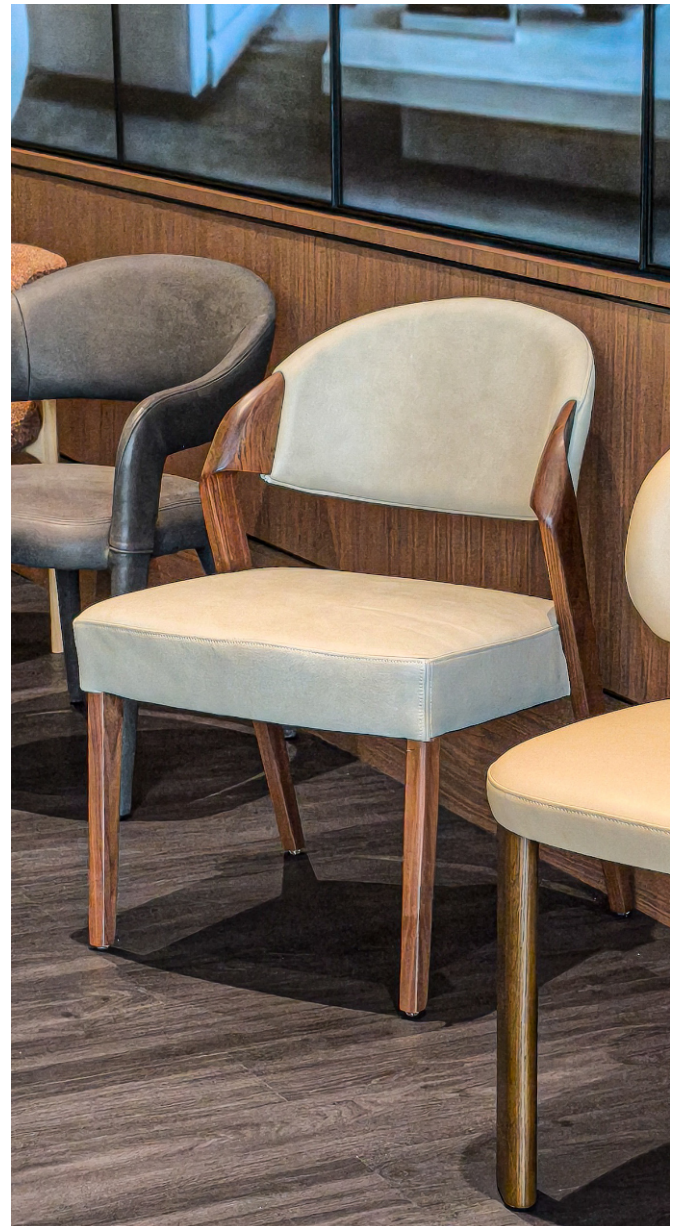

Clean silhouettes, understated upholstery, and refined materials allow the sculptural base to remain the visual anchor while creating a balanced and harmonious dining setting. Soft leather, neutral fabrics, and slim profiles introduce comfort without overwhelming the composition.

Chair model: 1687 Odie

It takes true craftsmanship to transform solid timber into seemingly fluid forms.

If you're looking for something that enhances the flowing curves of a sculptural dining table base, the 1760 Ravion chair features flowing curves create a sense of movement. Its wooden frame is shaped with a sense of continuous movement, flowing from the tapered legs into gently sculpted supports that embrace the curved backrest.

Rather than feeling rigid or structural, the wood appears almost fluid, with softened transitions and organic lines that give the chair an elegant, handcrafted character.

Not every piece needs to compete for attention.

Chair model: 1773 Valka ►

Valka's clean, slender frame keeps its visual footprint light, while the distinctive curved backrest introduces just enough character to hold its own beside a statement table. It complements rather than competes, creating balance through restraint.

◀ Chair model: 1780 Thador

Thador brings a fuller, more embracing silhouette, using gentle curves to soften the stronger geometry of a sculptural table. Its understated detailing keeps the overall setting refined, while its generous form adds warmth and comfort without making the space feel overly elaborate.

Chapter Two

Sculptural Pedestals

Perfect proportion rooted in elegance.

For generations, pedestal tables have been admired for their elegant proportions and practical design. This collection reinterprets a timeless silhouette with softened curves, refined detailing, and contemporary materials. The result is a dining table that feels both sculptural and understated, creating a quiet presence that complements rather than dominates the space.

Balanced beneath every tabletop, the pedestal base creates a sense of openness while allowing the natural beauty of wood and stone to take centre stage.

Bringing together the warmth of natural wood, the timeless beauty of natural stone, and the comfort of softly upholstered dining chairs, the Lilymay table creates a dining environment that feels calm, inviting, and effortlessly refined.

Its natural stone table top is a masterpiece shaped over millions of years, making each tabletop entirely unique. Delicate veining, subtle tonal variations, and organic textures ensure that no two pieces are ever the same.

At its centre, the integrated lazy Susan encourages effortless sharing, making every gathering as practical as it is beautiful.

Balanced upon a discreet metal plinth, the base appears to lift effortlessly from the floor, giving the table a sense of lightness while providing exceptional stability beneath the natural stone top.

Inspired by softly faceted forms, each panel catches light differently, creating depth, texture, and visual interest from every angle.

The smooth surface of natural marble reflects the quiet elegance of nature while offering a timeless foundation for modern dining.

Less Structure. More Space.

By placing support at the centre rather than the corners, pedestal bases create a cleaner visual profile and greater freedom around the table. The result is a dining space that feels lighter, more inviting, and naturally suited for gathering.

Artistic table bases that are designed to be admired from every angle should be paired with less bulky dining chairs so that the sculptural form remains fully visible, as seen here with the Callan table, paired with these 1700 Satrana chairs.

Paired here with a Brazil Pandora Marble table top, believed to have grounding and calming properties.

1746 Isabella with it's slim frame keeps designer bases visible.

Customise your chair upholstery for a completely different look.

With its sculptural walnut base and expressive natural stone top, the Dahnie dining table becomes the centrepiece of the room. The chairs are intentionally restrained, featuring clean lines, slim proportions, and warm leather upholstery that complement rather than compete.

Chair model: 1347 Lorsan

*When forms speak
the same language, harmony follows.*

Dahnie's flowing walnut base, when paired with a diamond-tufted dining chair, adds another layer of craftsmanship without competing for attention. The chair's rounded silhouette echoes the curves of the base, while the rich leather and diamond stitching introduce texture and depth. Together, the pairing feels warm, sophisticated and distinctly expressive, where form and detail complement one another.

Chair model: 1499 Mikola

A Homage to Natural Stone

Revealed by Light

The beauty within natural stone.

Some natural stones reveal an entirely different character when illuminated from behind.

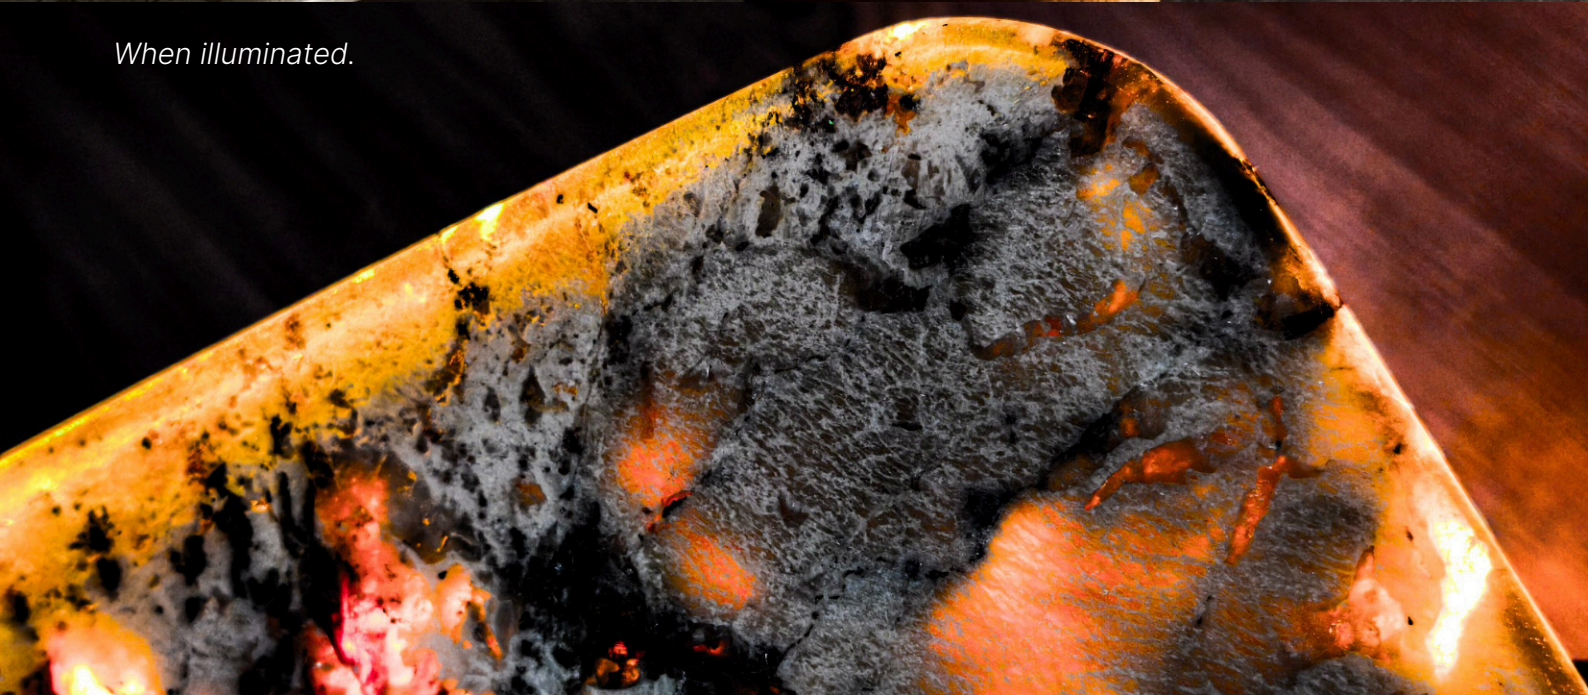

Light passes through translucent areas of the stone, bringing hidden layers, crystalline formations and variations in depth to life.

What appears subtle under natural light can become dramatically expressive when backlit, revealing patterns formed by nature over millions of years.

In natural light.

When illuminated.

NATURE, ILLUMINATED

When light hits stone,
nature's hidden beauty
suddenly comes to life.

*Light does not change the stone.
It reveals what was already there.*

Chapter Three

Beauty in Restraint

Italian design has long embraced the philosophy that elegance comes not from adding more, but from refining what remains.

A restrained table base creates the perfect foundation for more expressive seating.

Its clean, understated form allows chairs with sculptural silhouettes, curved armrests, or distinctive upholstery to become part of the composition without overwhelming the space. Rather than competing for attention, the table provides visual balance, allowing every surrounding piece to shine.

The result is a dining setting that feels layered, harmonious, and intentionally curated.

With its clean silhouette and gently softened curves, this Tilaya table base embraces a quieter approach to design. The subtle opening introduces lightness to the solid form, creating a harmonious balance between strength and elegance.

The goal is not excess, but harmony.

In contemporary Italian interiors, balance is achieved through contrast rather than repetition. Choose dining chairs with richer upholstery, curved forms, or expressive detailing to create visual interest without overwhelming the space.

This way, each piece has room to be appreciated, resulting in a dining setting that feels sophisticated, harmonious, and enduring.

Italian design values longevity over temporary trends. Rather than following what is fashionable for the moment, the focus is placed on balance, proportion, and enduring elegance that remains relevant through time.

Introduce personality through colour instead of complexity. This chair's restrained silhouette with an open-back design keeps it visually light and unobtrusive, upholstered in a distinctive colour to allow you to add personality to your space.

Chair model: 1631 Solise

Featuring a beautifully exposed solid wood frame, this chair celebrates the honesty of natural materials, with a timber frame that's visible from every angle.

Chair model: 1626 Bryon

Styling Recommendation

Curated, not coordinated.

Some of the most memorable dining spaces aren't perfectly matched. Mixing chair designs, upholstery colours, or subtle variations in form creates an effortless, collected aesthetic reminiscent of beautifully lived-in homes. The table remains the anchor, while each chair contributes its own personality to the composition.

This Gala table is paired with 1620 Reiner (brown), 1766 Ulmus (cream), 1701 Roland (tan).

The simplest forms often possess the greatest longevity.

Quiet Foundations

Soren's conical pedestal embraces clean geometry and balanced proportions, allowing the richness of natural walnut to take centre stage.

Beauty and practicality are never separated. Every curve, material, and detail is thoughtfully considered to create pieces that feel refined, comfortable, and effortless to live with every day.

The goal is not excess, but harmony — where function quietly enhances the experience of living.

The Nara table brings an immediate softness to the dining space, while its simple base keeps the overall form composed and understated. Pairing it with a straight-back chair introduces just enough structure that blends well with the table base.

Chair model: 1763 Koran

A chair should be considered from every angle.

A dining chair is rarely viewed only from the front. Around a dining table, its back often becomes the most visible part of the design, shaping the character of the space even when no one is seated.

From solid, upholstered forms to open timber structures, the design of a chair back influences its visual weight, comfort, and presence. A simpler silhouette can create a quieter, more restrained setting, while considered detailing can turn the chair into a feature from every angle.

A slight curved back allows the seat to hug perfectly around a round table when pushed all the way in, perfect for tight spaces. Its restrained geometry keeps the chair visually composed, making it ideal for dining settings where simplicity and balance take precedence.

Chair model: 1612 Gwyneth

An open timber frame reveals a series of slender vertical supports behind the upholstered back, transforming a functional element into a considered design detail. This gives the chair a lighter, more expressive presence from behind.

Chair model: 1716 Lailah

Styling Recommendation

Round stone tables naturally encourage conversation and create a softer flow within the dining space. To complement their organic silhouette, pair them with chairs that feature curved backrests or rounded arm profiles.

Chair model: 1714 Orion

The most effortless pairings are often those that share the same visual rhythm.

Chapter Four

Angled Confidence

From clean lines to bold presence.

Angular table designs such as the Gervan table bring a sense of structure, confidence, and architectural clarity to the dining room. Their crisp edges, straight lines, and sculptural pedestal forms create a look that feels grounded and contemporary.

Defined by strong geometry and a bold interplay of materials, the Dunling table makes its presence known from every angle. The structured walnut base is accented with sleek metallic elements, creating a sense of rhythm and architectural depth beneath the refined porcelain top. Confident without feeling excessive, it brings strength, contrast and character to the dining space.

Pair it with curved chairs and matching walnut profiles like this 1752 Luca to soften the look and create a warm, inviting atmosphere, or choose chairs with straight profiles and detailing to echo the table's geometric language.

When vertical lines align, the space feels complete.

The dining experience is shaped by more than just the tabletop. The vertical profile of the table base and the chair legs create a visual connection that brings balance and harmony to the space.

By pairing chairs with leg designs that echo the form, material, or rhythm of the table base, you create a cohesive setting that feels intentional, refined, and architecturally grounded.

Chair models: 1630 Marilee (left), 1670 Silvina (right)

Posh with Porcelain

One Surface. Two Expressions.

Matte or gloss, the finish changes more than how the surface looks. It changes how the entire dining space feels.

MATTE

Quiet. Soft. Understated.

A matte finish diffuses light across the surface, allowing the subtle movement and details of the stone pattern to emerge without demanding attention.

Its softer appearance brings a calm, contemporary quality to the dining space, making it especially suited to interiors built around warmth, texture and restraint.

Design it with:

Natural wood tones, textured fabrics and softer neutral palettes.

For spaces where elegance speaks quietly.

GLOSS

Polished. Reflective. Expressive.

A gloss finish interacts with light differently, creating greater depth, reflection and visual contrast across the surface.

The polished finish accentuates the stone pattern, giving the tabletop a more luminous and pronounced presence within the dining space.

Design it with:

Rich leather, darker woods, metallic accents and more sophisticated interiors.

For spaces designed to make an impression.

Chapter Five

Harmonious Geometry

A balance of curves and straight lines.

Geometry is more than a visual language. It is the foundation of comfort, balance, and proportion. Rather than relying on ornamentation, these designs celebrate the harmonious pairing between soft curves and disciplined lines.

This Indris dining table is paired with 1606 Temesia chairs.

Every chair in the Davorra collection is composed through a careful dialogue of curves, lines, and volumes. Circular seats soften linear frames. Gentle radii ease bold structures. Upholstery introduces warmth against the precision of walnut wood.

Seen here is the Velara table paired with the 1618 Kazim dining chairs.

Some chairs invite you to linger. Others frame the table with quiet elegance.

Rounded Balance

The softened square tabletop strikes a thoughtful balance between geometry and comfort. Its clean silhouette feels contemporary, while the rounded corners create a gentler presence, making conversations around the table feel naturally more intimate.

Rounded-square tables like this Alsa table pairs beautifully with chairs that echo their softened geometry. Choose chairs with curved backrests or rounded arms to reinforce the table's welcoming character.

Architectural Lines

everyday moments, and valuing meaningful time shared with family and friends. It is found in long meals that are never rushed, quiet evening conversations, and the simple pleasure of gathering around the table.

In Italy, dining is not treated as a task, but as an experience. Meals are often extended moments of connection, where people linger, talk, laugh, and enjoy each other's company without hurry. Even the smallest routines are approached with intention and appreciation for the present moment.

The softly curved back embraces the body, while the generously cushioned seat encourages guests to linger after meals. Framed by solid walnut, the chair combines tactile warmth with refined craftsmanship.

Chair model: 1685 Lumont

This base of the Zorya table creates a strong visual presence while allowing generous legroom, making it as practical as it is distinctive. Every connection is carefully crafted to create a dining table that's not only beautiful, but built with lasting integrity.

Its clean geometry and premium materials lend themselves equally well to an executive office, where the same design exudes confidence, authority, and refined taste.

Paired here with 1782 Hewynn to complete the look.

If you're styling an executive desk, choose a chair with commanding presence to complement its stature, as seen here with 1615 Voracia.

Every angle reveals the distinctive grain of natural walnut.
